Three weeks ago, I was scheduled to have lunch with two good friends. Just something we did together once a month or so to visit and catch up on what was going on in our busy lives. Two of us sat together waiting, one of us was running late apparently. A phone call found him twenty miles away hauling hay for their livestock. The meeting had slipped his mind entirely. Two weeks ago, we all met together for the postponed visit. He had just turned 70, 3 score and ten. One week ago, I got a message the he died peacefully at home with no indication of any health issues. Monday, I attended his memorial service. Life is but a Vapor, James 4:14. What would he have done differently in those three weeks had he known? Perhaps he would have done nothing differently. The hay is in the barn for a long cold winter and his family and friends know of his love for us. Good preparation. ~Thomas
